A. Questions to help determine whether an employee has a disability.

Under ADA, an employee has a disability if he or she has physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities or a record of such an impairment. The following questions may help determine whether an employee has a disability:

Does the employee have a physical or mental impairment?	Yes, Permanent impairment(s) ☐ Yes, Temporary Impairment(s) ☐	No ☐

If yes, what is the impairment or the nature of the impairment?

If you indicated the employee has a temporary impairment, please indicate the anticipated length of time until the employee is no longer temporarily impaired?

Answer the following question based on what limitations the employee has when his or her condition is in an active state and what limitations the employee would have if no mitigating measures were used.

- Mitigating measures include things such as medication, medical supplies, equipment, hearing aids, mobility devices, the use of assistive technology, reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids or services, prosthetics, learned behavioral or adaptive neurological modifications, psychotherapy, behavioral therapy, and physical therapy.
- Mitigating measures do not include ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses.

Does the impairment substantially limit a major life activity as compared to most people in the general population? Note: Does not need to significantly or severely restrict to meet this standard. It may be useful in appropriate cases to consider the condition under which the individual performs the major life activity; the manner in which the individual performs the major life activity; and/or the duration of time it takes the individual to perform the major life activity, or for which the individual can perform the major life activity.	Yes ☐	No ☐
	OR Describe the employee's limitations when the impairment is active.

If yes, what major life activity(s) (includes major bodily functions) is/are affected?

B. Questions to help determine whether an accommodation is needed.

An employee with a disability is entitled to an accommodation only when the accommodation is needed because of the disability. The following questions may help determine whether the requested (or a different) accommodation (including those that may mitigate the requested absence) is needed because of the disability.

Talk with your patient about the job functions he/she typically performs to answer the following questions:

Are job functions impeded? Do the limitations to major life activities indicated above impede or prevent your patient from performing his/her job functions?	☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, which job functions are impeded by the limitation? Which job functions is the patient unable to perform, or which benefits of employment are inaccessible without accommodation?

If yes, how are job functions impeded by the limitation? In what way(s) do the patient's limitation(s) impede his/her ability to perform typical job function(s) or access benefits of employment?

C. Questions to help determine effective accommodation options.

If an employee has a disability and needs an accommodation because of the disability, the employer must provide a reasonable accommodation, unless the accommodation poses an undue hardship. The following questions may help determine effective accommodations:

Do you have any suggestions, other than time away from work, regarding possible accommodations to enable performance of job functions? Yes ☐ No ☐

If yes, what are they?

If the patient's employer were able to accommodate the above restriction(s) or provide an accommodation to the patient's current role, would the patient be able to return to work. Yes ☐ No ☐

If so, please list the date your patient could return to work: _____(mm/dd/yyyy)
